Oregon Day 7

Wolf Haven
International

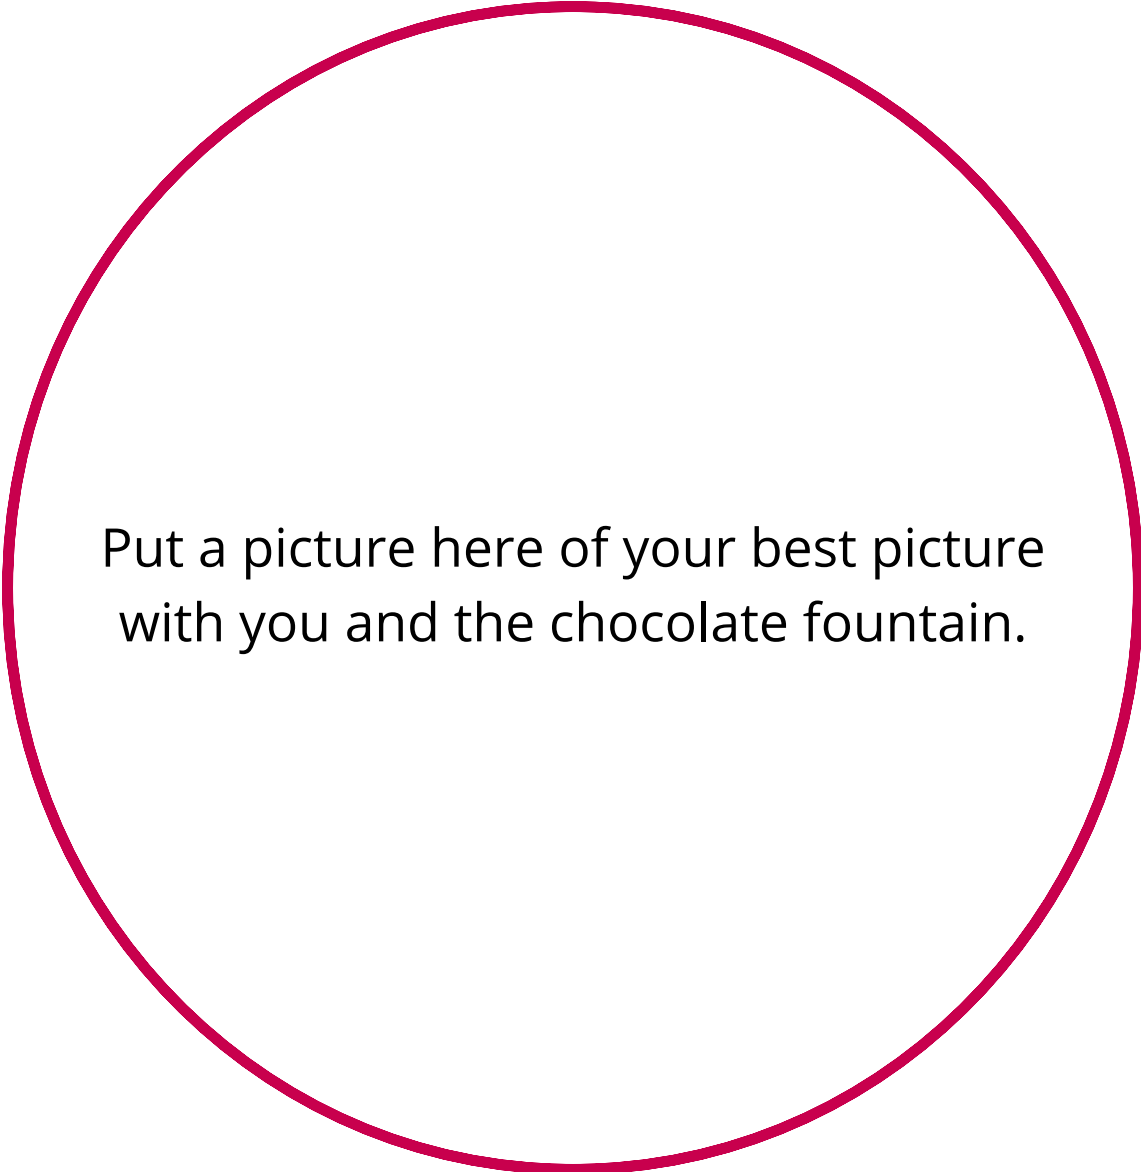

This was such a cool stop I had actually never seen wolves in person before so this was really intersecting. I think that sanctuaries like this are incredibly important because a lot of people have never seen wolves (like me). This educates us. The second reason and most important reason we need places like this is to keep these unique species alive and thriving not only for us but for the ecosystems. These ecosystems are extremely fragile and they can fall apart just like the photo the guide showed about Yellowstone national parks with and without wolves the difference is insane. As someone who regularly goes to denma island which is an island without predators but with a lot of deer they can cause a lot of damage to the ecosystems and plants so we need to keep their populations in check to prevent a large portion of their species from dying due to malnourishment.
