Alliteration, Onomatopoeia, and Hyperbole

Finding the alliteration

Alliteration is defined as (repeated first letters or sounds in words). In each of the following extracts from the poems below, there are obvious uses of alliteration. Underline the letters that form the alliteration.

- 1) Listen to the lions R-O-A-R!
Hear the leopard cry for gore,
Willy willy willy wah HOO!
[“The Kallyope Yell” by Vachel Lindsay]
- 2) I wakened on my hot, hard bed
Upon the pillow lay my head;
[“The Watch” by Frances Comford]
- 3) One thousand times one hundred is one hundred thousand,
One thousand times one thousand is one million
[“Memory from Childhood” by Antonio Machado]
- 4) Packed in like feathers,
The big bones and the little bones
[“The Fish” by Elizabeth Bishop]
- 5) Such sharpness shows the sweetest FREND:
Such cuttings rather heal than REND:
And such beginnings touch their END.
[“Paradise” by George Herbert]
- 6) Dawn and, distant, the steel-snarl and lyric
Of the chain-saw in deep woods:
I wake. Was it
Trunk-scream, bough-rip and swish, then earth-thud?
No-only the saw’s song, the saw
Sings: now! Sings:
Now, now, now, in the
Lash and blood-lust of an eternal present, the present
Murders the past, the nerve shrieks, the saw
[“Chain Saw at Dawn in Vermont in Time of Drouth” by Robert Penn Warren]

Onomatopoeia

Onomatopoeia is the formation and use of words that suggest by their sounds the objects or idea being named.

Read through the comics and then write down the sound-words. When you have done this, write down the action or occurrence each of the sound-words is representing
